

About Me

I'm Vera, an independent consultant helping investment firms, consultancies, and scale-ups make better decisions through customer insight, commercial diligence, and stakeholder intelligence.

My work sits at the intersection of research, strategy, and people. I design and deliver in-depth customer and expert interview programmes, market and competitor research, and leadership assessments that surface real risks, opportunities, and growth levers, especially in high-pressure contexts like acquisitions, market entry, and rapid scaling.

I bring over five years of experience working inside fast-growing, tech-led businesses, where I operated as a senior individual contributor across talent, workforce strategy, and people operations. I've supported organisations through funding rounds, international growth, and major organisational change, often acting as a trusted extension of leadership teams.

What sets my approach apart is how hands-on it is. I don't just advise, I plan the work, run the interviews, analyse the findings, and translate complexity into clear, actionable insight. Clients value the clarity, speed, and independence I bring, alongside strong cultural understanding of UK and Iberian markets.
